Vanderwolf Pine is an upright, pyramidal tree with closely spaced, twisted, silvery blue-green needles. It's flexible branches and shaggy bark make this tree an excellent accent to the landscape.

SGN Tried and True

GROWER'S NOTE: We have only recently started growing this tree, but so far we love it. The needle color and texture really stands out. There is a subtle silver stripe on the needle that fools your eye into thinking it's blue, making you do a double-take when looking at it. It seems to grow at a medium speed. Our only drawback is that it's hard to find enough quality starter liners for us to plant out - otherwise we would be growing more of these beauties!
